Well, @palikaras its "go time." MMTLP/MMAT shareholders should be seeing the log books that McCabe and Brda created in TRCH showing something like 140 oil/gas companies that supposedly expressed interest in buying the Orogrande assets. These were supposedly provided to MMAT execs prior to the creation of MMTLP as proof that the Orogrande was flush with oil. Most of us at this point know getting this full list and then doubling back to the people who McCabe and Brda presented as potential buyers for the NBH assets, etc., would clearly allow at least a third wave of lawsuits and lead to summary judgements in some of the 1209 lawsuits naming Brda and McCabe as defendants.

I spoke to George three days ago, the attached letter is my request for him to release these records and to force the release of the Share Intel data that the poster child for stock manipulation - Wes "Ain't No" Christian - maintained revealed an enormous volume of shorts and other data. That Ain't No has a business relationship - fairly symbiotic, actually - with the Share Intel folks notwithstanding, if the numbers were that damning, why hasn't Ain't No taken action with McCabe, Brda, and others in NBH, especially since Ain't No was hired by McCabe recently. (Maybe our favorite naked short chaser can do more than threaten to sue NBH shareholders for openly exposing the fraud committed by McCabe and Brda?)

Yes, I'm prepared to use counsel in Nevada to get the Share Intel data and this log book. Yours Truly is content to be "pro se" in Vermont US District Court in both Traudt v. Rubenstein and Traudt v. Atkins; the fact that a Texas state court may allow my attorneys to subpoena these records in Christian v. Traudt doesn't bode well for all of this data being shadows for much longer. So here's names to start with w

We also have names of the people at each of the above who was supposedly contacted.

In the final analysis, the bankruptcy court has a specific interest in identifying where the causation was for the bankruptcy (in toto), so my instincts tell me that a request to see all of this (as I am an MMTLP shareholder) would not be denied.

releasing it publicly is not straightforward, it is MMAT corporate information, now under the trustee's control. I have no objection to its release, but I must follow the appropriate legal process. I intend to use it in court as part of my defense. If the trustee does not permit disclosure beforehand, those seeking immediate access should direct their request to NBH, Mr. McCabe, or Mr. Brda, since the information originally came from them.

2.Regarding the ShareIntel and spoofing/naked shorting report:

The initial share intel report and subsequent analysis and report, (prepared by a well-known economist) were completed right after my departure from MMAT (coincidence?).

I reviewed the findings (a v2 report) in November 2023, strictly in my capacity as a Board member. During this time as a Board member I offered to provide additional new information directly to Wes Christian's team (provided to me by the community) who were investigating this, but the MMAT board and/or management denied it (coincidence?). In the Spring of 2024 when I was given access (under strict NDA) to the MMAT's data room when they were looking for buyers (as mentioned before - I brought a $45M recapitalisation plan with an investor group, which was denied), and as part of my due diligence I asked about the status of the Spoofing case... Management at the time specifically the CLO and the CEO of MMAT, respectively responded that

- a) the v2 report I had seen in Nov 2023 was FINAL, and
- b) strongly recommend that "you do not want to shake that tree" (coincidence?).

I now have primary evidence showing that the Chairman of MMAT, during the period I was conducting investor due diligence, directly asked Mr Wes Christian to NOT SPEAK to me regarding the spoofing case (coincidence?). I believe he was never told why.

Overall, MMAT funded these engagements with Mr Wes Christian and shareintel, the data now resides with the bankruptcy trustee, who has appointed special counsel to pursue it. Recent subpoenas confirm active efforts are underway.

To be clear, the custodian of the data and any actionable steps, (including matters tied to MMTLP before the spinout) lie with the MMAT bankruptcy trustee, not NBH and certainly not me.

To be crystal clear: I do not control the ShareIntel data or the subsequent enforcement steps.

As the largest MMAT shareholder, I'm pleased to see the Trustee making steady progress on the spoofing/stock manipulation case. From what I've heard, the subpoenas are being treated with the seriousness they deserve (by most recipients), which strengthens the path toward maximizing recovery for the estate and holding responsible parties accountable.

That is the $1.4 billion question. First, a small correction: the initial ShareIntel data covered only the MMAT CUSIP. It was later extended to include TRCH and MMTLP; however, to my understanding, ShareIntel was unable to obtain full MMTLP data which is an important part will be addressed by the current investigation.

As for the broader question, I can only offer my opinion. Based on what I observed, some members of the Meta board (along with new management), especially after the data came in, did not prioritize protecting our investors and viewed concerns about stock manipulation as a nuisance rather than a serious issue. Until I personally reviewed the Version 2 (V2) report from Wes Christian in November 2023, I was also cautious and on the fence about the trading irregularities.

However, I am now certain of this: if the Board had provided me with the V1 or V2 report earlier, I would have insisted that the company either FIGHT for shareholders or they should resign immediately, so I can add Board members who would not put their own careers above their fiduciary duty and their duty of care.

Moments like these remind us: true character is tested not when things are easy, but when standing for the truth demands courage.

offered to provide additional new information directly to Wes Christian's team (provided to me by the community) who were investigating this, but the MMAT board and/or management denied it (coincidence?)

In the Spring of 2024 when I was given access (under strict NDA) to the MMAT's data room when they were looking for buyers (as mentioned before - I brought a $45M recapitalisation plan with an investor group, which was denied), and as part of my due diligence I asked about the status of the Spoofing case... Management at the time specifically the CLO and the CEO of MMAT, respectively responded that
 a) the v2 report I had seen in Nov 2023 was FINAL, and
 b) strongly recommend that "you do not want to shake that tree" (coincidence?).

I now have primary evidence showing that the Chairman of MMAT, during the period I was conducting investor due diligence, directly told Wes Christian to NOT SPEAK to me regarding the spoofing (coincidence?). I believe he was requested to do so.

Overall, MMAT funded these engagements with Mr Wes Christian and shareintel, the data now resides with the bankruptcy trustee, who has appointed special counsel to pursue it. Recent subpoenas confirm active efforts are underway.

To be clear, the custodian of the data and any actionable steps, (including matters tied to MMTLP before the spinout) lie with the MMAT bankruptcy trustee, not NBH and certainly not me.

To be crystal clear: I do not control the ShareIntel data or the subsequent enforcement steps.

As the largest MMAT shareholder, I'm pleased to see the Trustee making steady progress on the spoofing/stock manipulation case. From what I've heard, the subpoenas are being treated with the seriousness they deserve (by most recipients), which strengthens the path toward maximizing recovery for the estate and holding responsible parties accountable.

Thank you for your honesty. I would love to know why both the $MMTLP share Intel data and NBH investor presentations were held back by the Meta Board.

That is the $1.4 billion question. First, a small correction: the initial ShareIntel data covered only the MMAT CUSIP. It was later extended to include TRCH and MMTLP; however, to my understanding, ShareIntel was unable to obtain full MMTLP data which is an important part will be
